Description

Description:
Chiseled and gilded bronze.
These luminaires, very inspired by Rocaille decorations, are composed of a large base decorated with foliage and openwork trellis panels. The six sconces are in foliage and carry binets in leaf corollas too.
At the start of the arms, three rolled up and swirling leaves create a kind of conch in the center. The peculiarity of these candelabra lies in the inverted proportions of the habit.
They are low and wide, resembling a centerpiece in a way. The central conch, although it is not made for this, can carry three large rose or peony buds, giving a very "Ancien Régime" charm to these lights, and the spacing of the arms does not crush this small impromptu bouquet .

The carving work is exceptional and very close to that of the Ancien Régime, the particularity of which was a chiseled decoration on the barely visible parts.
The arms of light are decorated with detached bays, ending in scrolls on which a binet and its very worked counter cup are grasped .
