Description

Mahogany clock with Wire suspension system, Empire period. Its main part carved in the shape of a Lyre features a Bronze Dial with two hands with inscriptions in Roman numerals. It is richly crafted: friezes of Shells and beaded around the perimeter, Decorations of foliage in the center. It is crowned with a Bronze ornament carved with Acanthus, Scrolls and Flowers. On either side of the instrument are integrated two fictitious pivots also cut. The lower part of the Lyre is generously embellished with chiseled Bronzes in Crown of Roses and Rinceaux, in the heart of which we discover two heads of Lions. We can make out a pretty Butterfly Pendulum through the five vertical rods representing the strings of the instrument. It hangs from a wire integrated into the bicentenary mechanism of this Clock.
