Description

Made of solid Cuban mahogany and speckled in places, with sometimes traces of sapwood. It is topped with a richly molded cornice.The overmantel, made up of two large tongue-and-groove boards, mounted between crosspieces and uprights. It rests on an important mantle cut in the mass.Two reduced uprights support the trumeau and, as for the top, they are linked to the wall by panels mounted between crosspieces and uprights. This completely restored fireplace is from the middle of the 18th century.
