Description

Miniature in gouache on cardboard paper representing a young man in bust. He is dressed in civilian clothes and wears a white cotton shirt and a vest whose collar goes up to his ears. He is also wearing a narrow tie framed by two protruding shirt tips and an earring. This earring could be a sign of membership in a companion federation. He also could be a sailor. Great presence in the eyes. Meticulousness in the details and highlights of white. The portrait is protected under glass and mounted in a carved and gilded wooden frame. The latter opens on the miniature by an elegant mantling decoration. On the back of the portrait is written on paper a small paragraph in pen dated November 25, 1805.

On the back, the miniature has been taped by its
