Description

Large library of oak paneling, from the Louis XVI period. Two doors with original blown glass tiles. Flat sides, it was originally integrated into a paneling. This library can be used as such, structural reinforcement hooks have been put in place, mounted it is solid and stable. It can also be used on the facade, integrated into a paneling. During various dismantlings, the assemblies have been abused, and it requires a little restoration if we want to redo all the tenons. However, with the hooks, it can be assembled and disassembled without problems. The interior has been lacquered in white. Original shelving (also lacquered), adjustable with rack system. Clever door closing system with small cable activating a spring (see photos). Dimensions; Maximum width: 183 cm at the cornice, 169 cm at the body
