Description

At the end of the 19th century, the explosion of globalization, the acceleration of world trade and the vitality of colonial empires breathed new life into European decorative arts. If Japanese and Chinese influences are particularly appreciated, the same is true of Middle Eastern influences, especially in England. In London, a few stores, including Liberty, specialize in Moorish or Moorish-inspired furniture and decorative arts. It is, as on our shelf, an interweaving of geometric patterns, finely openwork silky wood essences, like lace. The use of mother-of-pearl makes the main motifs of the furniture vibrate and gives it this unique and fascinating connotation of furniture from the Middle East. Our orientalist piece of furniture is stamped
