Description

Important inkwell holder, offering two small receptacles in chiseled bronze with beaded friezes and plant decorations. They are composed of lids held from the back, and the interiors are gilded. On the back, a young woman is seated, resting on her left elbow, her right hand resting on her ankle. Looking down, she seems pensive. Her hair is pulled back and styled in a bun. A long drape hugs her delicate silhouette, and leaves her shoulders and arms adorned with bare jewellery. These three silvered bronze elements rest on a sea-green marble plinth. At the front, the latter is logically shaped like a basin, thus creating a space initially reserved for feathers. We will also appreciate the movements of this terrace, generously rounded and grooved around its edges. This beautiful decorative object ends with
