The artist: Edmond Louis Auguste Lévêque (1814-1875), born in Abbeville, sculptor and painter, student of the Beaux-Arts in Paris under Guersant, David d'Angers and Rude. He exhibited regularly from 1833 to 1874 and participated in the Salons in the painting sections between 1848 and 1872. This work delicately illustrates the symbolic beauty of the female body, approaching nudity from a philosophical and aesthetic angle, evoking the ideal of human perfection through the tradition of the artistic nude, where the form is sublimated. Inspired by Greek thought, this approach to nudity pays homage to the unity between mind and body, beauty and goodness. This precious bronze will please art collectors and will embellish a refined interior with a touch of timeless idealism.
