artists of the 16th century. Stylistic perfection and pictorial quality are made evident by a particular chromaticism with bright shades, with warm and cold colors matched in an incomparable way. The shades on rosy and luminous complexions stand out from the dark background with a result with a great volumetric effect. The exceptionally lively blues and light blues stand out. Finally, the perfect balance in the arrangement of the protagonists of the scene should be underlined. The characters are depicted in all positions, both front and side, full face and in profile, giving the author the opportunity to express his great portrait skills. A particular mention to the splendid pictorial description of the naked bodies of the two Children which can hardly be found in similar works
