Description

- Aubusson tapestry panel in wool and silk from the 18th century.

-This tapestry gives us a glimpse of an exotic decor in which a column of flowering plants develops over the entire height with a pagoda on the right, two characteristic elements of exotic landscapes in the "taste of Pillement". A couple of positioned characters animates the scene.

-This tapestry offers a rich color palette with shades of beige punctuated with blues/greens. The gaze, attracted by the red of the characters' clothes, is then taken on board by the flowering plant column. It is enriched with a border decorated with a garland of rolled flowers.
