Description

This 20th century Russian school painting is an evocative depiction of a turn-of-the-century street scene, with two majestic Russian palaces in the background. The gray sky gives the impression that it has just rained, thus reinforcing the melancholic atmosphere that emerges from the work. The artist managed to accurately capture everyday life in Russia at that time. The subtle colors used for the figures and buildings add extra texture and depth to the artwork, while the reflection of the water in the road adds extra dimension to the scene. The whole is enhanced by an important golden frame, which gives a museum atmosphere to this remarkable work of art. This painting offers a moving insight into Russian history and culture, and would be a treasured piece for any art collection.
