Description

This wrought iron medallion comes from a Bordeaux building dating from the 18th century. He probably officiated at the top of the door like a mascarons. It has the following coat of arms: a crescent moon, a lion, a star. From the 18th century, this medallion is in the Louis XV style, as highlighted by the rococo sinuosities and the volutes, as well as the acanthus leaf motif from which the composition is arranged. The condition is not excellent. There are a few gaps but it is an object of history.
