during the Saint-Saëns Festival) and of course painter. Associate of French Artists since 1966, he exhibited at the Paris Salon since the 1930s and until the very month of his death in 1982. In Paris, he was exhibited at the famous picture rails of the Bernheim and Cambacérès galleries. Numerous personal exhibitions were also organized in Marseille, Nice, Lyon, Biarritz and even Périgueux. He will spend the last years of his life, from 1965, in Chancelade, creating small bright and colorful landscapes of the surroundings and publishing a few collections of poetry.

It is precisely in the park of this property of Chancelade called "la Maison Carrée" that this picnic is realized. A small path emerges from the woods adorned with beautiful summer colors. Two characters, certainly children, take a walk in this family setting.
