Description

This pair of candelabra is a striking example of the Aesthetic Movement, a late 19th-century design philosophy that emphasized beauty and artistic expression. The candelabra showcase the movement's characteristic blend of classical and exotic influences, resulting in a unique and captivating aesthetic.

Crafted from a rich, patinated metal, likely bronze or brass, the candelabra feature intricate details and elaborate ornamentation. The central figures, possibly representing mythological beings or allegorical figures, are particularly striking, with their flowing drapery and expressive faces. The overall design is dynamic and asymmetrical, reflecting the Aesthetic Movement's rejection of rigid symmetry.

Each candelabrum features multiple branches,
