Description

A set of medical suction cups in one late 19th century walnut box. The nickel-plated set is complete with three original glass suction cups, their release valves with butterfly clamping, a hand pump and the original transfer hose. A lamp for heating too. Hose and pump connected to a suction cup created an air vacuum on the patient's skin. We then closed the valve, and we moved on to a second suction cup. (so-called dry cupping method) .

No mark, typical instrument from the end of the 19th century or circa 1900, original walnut box.

An interesting and complete medical set.

measures 24cm x 17cm x 10cm, for 1.3kg
