fortress), St. Isaac's Cathedral, the Moscow Kremlin, etc. Jewelry technique of blackening images on silver was very popular in Russia. The grooves on the silver surface were cut by hand with a chisel (engraving) and subsequently covered with black enamel or inked with special compositions. Jewelry items using a similar technique were also made by famous Russian craftsmen and jewelry houses (Faberge, Ovchinnikov, etc.). Partial gold plating. Items are stacked, in a non-original wooden box.
