Description

I present a comfortable armchair, a large Louis XV style living room model from the mid-19th century, tapestry with small dots with floral patterning and pretty colors, a wide seat with its beautiful backrest (said to the Queen) was a originally intended for the Ladies of the Court to settle comfortably with a wide dress. In stained beech, with a beautiful "whiplash", this pretty seat has been executed with fine sculptures of flowers and the very eventful armrest falls, the shell legs of which are in good condition and this piece of furniture has not suffered of parasites, a pretty piece where you have to take a little bit of the backrest a little missing otherwise the upholstery can still withstand service, a seat full of spirit
