Description

The vintage dresser in light beech from the 60s is a charming and retro piece of furniture that was discovered during a search in the North of France, in Lille. This piece of furniture has undergone a meticulous restoration to restore it to its former glory. Made of beech, this dresser offers a warm and natural look thanks to its light wood color. Its vintage style gives it a certain timeless elegance that fits easily into different types of interior decorations. This vintage chest of drawers has three spacious drawers, providing ample space for storing various items such as clothes, accessories or daily necessities. The drawers open and close smoothly, allowing easy access to their contents. One of the characteristic elements of this vintage chest of drawers are its compass feet, which add a touch of sophistication and lightness to its design.

These feet, in addition to their pleasing aesthetics, were carefully repaired and reattached during the restoration of the piece of furniture. The restoration process was thorough and meticulous. The dresser has been completely sanded to remove imperfections and prepare the surface for a new protective varnish. The top has been specially treated with a quality varnish, giving it a smooth and durable finish. The dresser handles have also been cleaned to restore their original luster. These details bring a beautiful harmony to the whole piece of furniture, highlighting its authentic vintage character. It is important to note that there is a small defect on the dresser top. However, this does not alter its functionality or overall aesthetics. On the contrary, it can even add a touch of history and character to this vintage piece of furniture. As for the dimensions, the chest of drawers measures W99.5cm x D45cm x H79cm, which makes it perfectly suitable for various interior spaces. Whether in a bedroom, living room or hallway, this vintage chest of drawers will bring a retro and functional note to your decor. In summary, this vintage chest of drawers in light beech from the 60s is a piece of furniture restored with passion and dedication. Its vintage style, attractive compass feet, practical storage capacity and suitable dimensions make it an ideal choice for those looking to add a retro and elegant touch to their interior.
