Description

The Rocket lamp from the 70s, produced by the Novoplast company, is a real vintage gem that will bring a retro and warm touch to your interior. With its teak structure and fiberglass lampshade, this authentic lamp from Czechoslovakia embodies the aesthetics of the 70s in all its splendour. The publisher of this lamp, Novoplast, is known for producing high quality furniture and accessories, and this Rocket lamp is no exception. It perfectly represents the era of the 70s, when bold design and the use of natural materials were very popular. The marriage of teak and fiberglass creates an attractive visual contrast. The teak, with its warm hues and natural texture, adds an organic touch to the lamp, while the fiberglass shade diffuses the light in a soft and subtle way. This unique combination allows the Rocket Novoplast lamp to create a warm and welcoming ambience in any space. With its green color and wooden accents, this lamp fits perfectly into a retro or vintage decor. It can be used as a central decorative element in a living room, bedroom or office, adding a nostalgic and elegant note to your space. The Rocket lamp operates easily thanks to its switch located on the cord. Just plug it in and turn it on to enjoy its soft glow. Please note that the bulb is not supplied, but it uses an E27 type bulb, which is readily available off the shelf.

Compass feet, a hallmark of 70s design, give this lamp sleek stability and add an extra dimension to its retro aesthetic. It is important to mention that there may be small stains on the fiberglass, which adds to its vintage charm and reminds of its history. The dimensions of the Rocket lamp are 117 cm in height and 27 cm in diameter, making it a medium-sized piece that can easily fit into different living spaces. In summary, the Rocket lamp from the 70s edited by Novoplast is an ideal choice for those looking for an exceptional piece of vintage design. With its teak structure, its fiberglass lampshade, its wood green color and its retro style, this lamp will bring a warm and nostalgic atmosphere to your interior. Whether as accent lighting or as a central decorative element, the Rocket lamp is sure to capture attention and arouse admiration.
