Description

Incredible mechanism to enlarge this 19th century extending table. Two endless screws embedded in a steel tube separate the two parts of the top, a small removable crank allows a single person to handle the mechanism, the base of the feet is hollow and conceals wheels that facilitate operation, by turning the crank, the table unfolds without difficulty and can accommodate 16 guests if you put the 3 extensions. The mechanism is English and is marked with a brass plate bearing the emblem of the company which produced this ingenious mechanism. The table is solid mahogany, even the slides which, given the hardness of this wood, are not worn and are in perfect condition.
