Description

Mythological group in Meissen porcelain dating from the middle of the 18th century, circa 1750, mark in blue with two crossed swords, unglazed base. Representation of Bacchus holding a cup, seated on a barrel, a young faun at his feet filling a gourd, Rocaille triangular base. This group was certainly part of a larger centerpiece consisting of 3 parts. Height: 27.5 cm Width of the base approximately 17 cm. Good general condition. Note: small restorations of the faun's fingers and a few finger tips. A micro chip (2 mm) at the base, a crack or hair at the cut (see photos). A similar group was sold at Christies on December 19, 2007.
