Description

Set of 4 glazed earthenware panels in flamboyant colours, for architectural facade decoration, made by the ceramist Emile Müller: large rectangular panels with blue outlines, framing a lyre motif, with pine needles; on each side, a green baluster

The panels are signed Müller Ivry

Emile Müller, a French ceramist, sculptor and architect, founded his company La Grande Tuilerie in Ivry Port (Seine) in 1854, specializing in ceramic products for construction and industry, as well as ceramic art. His achievements, rewarded at the Universal Exhibitions, will bring him international fame. During the Universal Exhibition of 1889, Émile Müller made the sandstone balustrades of the Eiffel Tower.
