a beautiful souvenir of the grand tour, a great classic of antiquity.

The Venus de Medici is a famous Greek marble sculpture representing the goddess Aphrodite (Venus for the Romans). It is a copy of the 1st century BC. AD of an original bronze statue, of the type of Aphrodite of Cnide[1], which would have been made by a pupil of Praxiteles. It has become a landmark in the evolution of the Western classical tradition. It is located in the Uffizi Gallery in Florence, more precisely in the Uffizi gallery.

The goddess is represented in a fugitive pose, as if surprised when she emerges from the waves, as evoked by a dolphin at her feet, which could not be part of the original bronze.
