Description

Pretty Louis XV period console in waxed natural wood. It rests on two strongly curved and sculpted feet joined by a turbulent spacer sculpted with a large shell forming a pronounced angle that rises upwards to match the angle formed by the support. The belt, openwork in its center, is richly carved on the front on a grid background, presenting openwork rock patterns. It is topped with a red marble top from the Pyrenees with a Corbin beak profile. Superb Provençal work from the 18th century. Good condition.
