Description

Paul GARNIER (1831-1886) created his factory of plant and fruit liqueurs in Noyon first of all then because of its destruction during the war of 1870, in Enghien where the orchards allowed the manufacture of his famous "abricotine", highly prized nectar in the USA, and distributed by Julius Wile and bros from 1877; Endowed with a remarkable sense of business, he understood the interest of bottles in the eyes of amateurs and multiplied the models of all kinds. Thus was born one of the most important and richest collection of containers, produced by the best manufacturers of France and Europe. Here, this table-bottle on its wire easel, was born under the number 186 in Italy in the 60s by the Coronetti workshops and its originality and its conservation make it an unexpected curiosity when comes, at the end of
