Description

Louis XV worker in rosewood and rosewood marquetry, made in a Parisian workshop in the mid-19th century. This rare piece of furniture has a top rich with arabesques and rosewood scrolls, inlaid in a rosewood veneer arranged in butterfly wings. The center is embellished with a light wood marquetry adding contrast and refinement to the whole. This top opens with two chiseled brass hinges and is held by an original compass also on the right side. We notice a lock with two hooks in perfect working order accompanied by a sculpted key. A mirror surrounded by colored rods is framed in rosewood. Inside this worker is a rosewood sliding drawer, accompanied by a box with three compartments. Once pulled we discover a rosewood interior arranged in four sheets. The front of the drawer, with movement
