Description

Imposing bust of a man in white marble, bearing an inscription on the side of the terrace:
RAYMOND SUDRE 1920.
It is possibly a portrait or self-portrait of the artist.

RAYMOND SUDRE: born in Perpignan in 1870, is the son of a marble worker from whom he learned stone cutting.
He moved to Paris to enter the School of Fine Arts where he became a pupil of the sculptor Alexandre Falguière, then after his death, of Antonin Mercié. He won the second Grand Prix de Rome for sculpture in 1900 for the David statue.
