Description

Very interesting small solid silver flashlight from the middle of the 20th century.

The body of the lamp is in finely striated vermeil for a good grip. The ends are in ivory.

The bottom cap is marked: Mappin - Paris

It is probably a lady's lamp, made by Mappin & Webb, as a luxury version of a common object.

Inside is a battery marked "Microlux".

The lamp obviously no longer works but the filament of the bulb seems to be intact.
