Description

Rare and beautiful antique Louis XV style fireplace in delightful Bois Jourdan marble. Dating from the late 19th century. The shaped, double moulded shelf rests above a scrolled, panelled frieze, centered by a foliate, a-symmetrical shell. Scrolls also on both endblocks. The tappering, angled and panelled jambs are supported on sturdy footblocks. The Bois Jourdan is a rare marble, found in the north-west of France. This fireplace is in a perfect condition. Will be delivered with original old Carrara marble floortiles to make a frontfloor. We have also original terra-cotta foyer-tiles, great option if you wanna go for a real open fire. (Not the color-tiles, showen inside the fireplace, they are not original to this mantel.) Photo's are taken before dismantling, fireplace is cleaned now in
