Description

Character appearing "The Old Sage" recognizable by the large stick on which he leans. Many times represented in Asian Art in different materials: ivory, bone, hard stone (including sodalite)

The sculpture is placed on a wooden base numbered and signed with Chinese characters. Sodalite, so named because it contains sodium, is a mineral species of the group of silicates, it is the main constituent of lapis lazuli. First discovered in the English colonies: Canada, India, South Africa.. It is present in its natural state in large quantities in Afghanistan but is no longer exploited there. New deposits are in northern Namibia.
