1930. Luc Belin received at the end of this 43rd edition "the medal of honor" of the show for all of his work. The newspaper Le Salut Public reported on this in its edition of March 4, 1930: "The artists of the Société Lyonnaise des Beaux-Arts voted yesterday for the attribution of the medal of honor of the Salon. The vote designated M Luc Belin Everyone will applaud this choice, which comes to consecrate the merits of a conscientious artist who loves his art with fervor, whose works have long been rightly noticed. At the present Salon, he exhibited in particular an impressive canvas: "The banks of the Rhône (51) and the tower of Sainte-Colombe-lès-Vienne (52)."
