Description

Rare sugar spoon in solid silver from the 18th century. At that time, sugar remained the privilege of an elite. Around 1735, goldsmiths created a new utensil for sprinkling: the sugar spoon. The spoon is decorated with a country scene and fruits. The curved stem ends in a winding, it supports a mask with the head of a winged donkey and a pretty, very finely chiseled rooster! Hallmarks for general farmers employed in Dijon (Côte d'Or) under the direction of Jean-Jacques Prévost general farmer from 1762 to 1768
