Description

Antique Gold and Silver Diamond Flower Wire Brooch. Nineteenth century.

The central diamond that adorns the central part of the flower is an antique brilliant cut, larger than the rose-cut diamonds that decorate the petals and leaves.

Free insured delivery.

The upper part of the brooch, which comes into contact with the diamonds, is made of silver, a cold-colored metal that was previously preferred when you wanted to leave the color of the diamond without the yellow reflections of gold, before the invention. white gold in the 20th century.

The lower part is in yellow gold.

The needle lock and a mechanism that securely closes the pin are in good condition.
