Description

Important earthenware vase in the Renaissance style decorated with foliage, scrolls, chimeras and macaroons on a nuanced ultramarine blue background. The baluster body is decorated with a cartouche inspired by the painting "The Toilet of Venus" created by the French painter François Boucher (1703-1770). The choker neck is long and the lip is everted. This vase has two large handles fixed on the shoulder representing coiled snakes. These elements rest on a slightly rounded pedestal. This earthenware vase will please you for its size and originality.  Period: 2nd part 19th century Very good condition.
