Description

Charming little lively table in blond oak with a long drawer at the waist. This has a facade with a slightly molded perimeter, projecting from the belt. It is also decorated with a soft, lens-shaped draw button. This table is characterized by its moving belt. This crosspiece (front, sides and rear) is cut out in the lower part and the lower molding subtly emerges by knocking it out. This small piece of furniture rests on 4 arched legs with exterior moldings. They end in scrolls and hoofed feet. In addition, the edge of the feet is slightly rounded with a recess of wood towards the molding. Finally, the top of this table is made up of 3 well-joined boards. This period piece of furniture will charm you with the finesse of its lines and its authenticity.  Period: Late 18th century Excellent condition after restoration
