Meyer Painter with academic training; after some classic experiences in exhibitions and competitions won with first prizes, he moved towards a more self-taught painting, trying to be the least influenced and to maintain a certain authenticity. An exterior painter, he travels to many regions in order to always be in contact with the subject. His observation and experience led him to innovate a technique that he called undulism. The complete work is composed of multiple juxtapositions of slightly curved twin touches which give the painting an undulating effect. These works are most often in gouache but also in oil. Good
