The "Civitates Orbis Terrarum", or "Braun & Hogenberg", is an urban atlas in six volumes and the largest book of city views and plans ever published: 363 engravings, sometimes colored. It was one of the best-selling works of the last quarter of the 16th century. Georg Braun wrote the text accompanying the plans and views on the back. A large number of plates were engraved after the original drawings of Joris Hoefnagel (1542-1600). The first volume was published in
