Description

Box with cut sides in wood covered in leather, with gilded decoration with small floral motifs in the lower part, and coat of arms to be identified, those of a prelate, on the front of the lid. It is most likely a box intended for storing cutlery, from the 18th century, later and as often transformed into a mail box, with three compartments inside covered with garnet-colored silk in used condition. Wrought iron top handle and lock, key missing. Dimensions: height 27 cm, width 16.5 cm, depth 10.5 cm. This object is generally in good condition, although one of the hinges has broken.
