Description

Raymond Georgein (1920-2002): "Without changing the brain", collage and oil on canvas 92 newspaper headlines perfectly evoke the revolutionary excitement that reigned at the time... The Artist practiced two arts in particular: sculpture and painting/collage of which our works are perfect examples. Anchored in his time, a little forgotten subsequently, he is rediscovered today by fans of the sixties/seventies of whom he was one of the most emblematic artists whose works presented in numerous personal exhibitions all around the world were acquired by international museums... Do not hesitate to ask us for photos or additional information by email or telephone.
