Description

Walnut armchair, called "end table" due to its shallow depth, in the Renaissance style, covered with a checkered canvas, studded on the seat and back, which you can cover with the fabric of your choice. The seat, made in the traditional way with springs and horsehair, is squared. The armrests, in the shape of a stock and with movement, are molded with volute eyes and supported by turned consoles. The uprights with sculpted patterns are joined by a central crosspiece also turned. The base is secured by an H-shaped spacer. This comfortable and good quality armchair will be given a second lease of life with a fabric to suit your taste. ***** Period: Late 19th Century
