Description

Description: Chiseled bronze, gold-molded and brown patina. These very rare small chandeliers were intended to light an alcove, a cabinet or a corner in a boudoir for example. The gallows is held on the wall by a large golden plate; We will see a man's mask surrounded by a crown of laurels emerging from acanthus leaves. The gallows, very animated with scrolls, carry the five chains of the chandelier. The chandelier itself and the suspension principle are in the spirit of antique oil lamps. There are in fact 6 lights, a central light emerges by removing the gadrooned finial. Moreover, at this antique time most oil lamps were equipped with chains in order to move them around the room according to the need for light, so Restoration candelabra from the 19th century often carry a chain to symbolize the
