Description

Half meter bar in walnut wood, Italy second half of the 19th century.
Antique measuring instrument with brass closure at the ends and validation stamps for periodic inspection.
As on other measuring instruments used in commercial establishments involved in the sale of merchandise, the responsible authority carried out periodic checks on container scales or measuring instruments in general to protect buyers from possible scams perpetrated using counterfeit measuring devices.
To certify that the checks had taken place, stamps were placed on them.
At the ends we also find what, stylized,
