Description

André L'Helguen (born in 1935) for Keraluc Quimper Ceramic pitcher decorated with stylized flowers and geometric patterns. Height: 27 cm. Of Breton origin, André d'Helguen is a ceramist with a very particular style who worked throughout his career at Keraluc, an earthenware company in Quimper. The Keraluc earthenware factory is a Quimper earthenware company created in 1946 by the ceramic engineer Victor Lucas and active until 1984. Its original style and search for modernity distinguish it from traditional Quimper earthenware. It has allowed many artists to create original pieces.
