Description

This free-standing piece of furniture, entirely in solid oak, has a sloping flap, finely molded on each side, opening on original iron hinges. The interior offers four identical drawers, two of which are equipped with functional locks with keys and two with brass buttons only. This space is completed by five compartments as well as a large lower niche. This chest locks with two original and functional double hook locks with keys and oval brass entries. This rare piece of furniture, assembled with a dovetail, has a bronze handle on each side with a stop for easy transport. The perimeter of the base is decorated with a cove and bec-de-corbin molding. With the expansion of international trade in the 18th and 19th centuries, the profession of money changer grew in importance. This authentic and quality
