Born in Warsaw in 1857, Stefan Bakalowicz immersed himself in painting from an early age thanks to his father Wladislaw, a genre painter. The exotic was one of the painter's main sources of inspiration, as demonstrated by his works of Indian settings Symphony of the Morning. His first trip was to Algeria in 1883, followed by explorations in Egypt and Tripoli in 1903, which resulted in a series of Orientalist works that were presented at the 1931 Paris Colonial Exhibition and met with great success.

Also part of this corpus are five portraits of young Egyptian men, as the inscription at the top right
