Delicate cross made of paper and crucifix under glass from the late 18th century - early 19th century. Work of devotion and patience to create a branch garnished with numerous foliage, flowers and bunches of grapes using thin strips of rolled paper (colored red or blue for some) and gilded on the edge. In the center a crucifix in silver metal, below which we can see a red wax seal under the decoration. This cross is covered with paper with marbled effects around the edge. The whole remains in very good condition.
