Description

Magnificent and lush painting with languid naked women on a couch, nestled in cushions against a background of colorful fabrics. This voluptuous evocation of the orient is by the hand of the french painter Henri Le Riche. We find in this composition his know-how as a designer and enameler, the finesse and accuracy of his line mixed with a magnificence of colors. These naked bodies seem bathed in an iridescent expanse of emerald-toned. Henri Le Riche was born on April 12, 1868 in Grenoble (Isère) and died on March 26, 1944 in Neuilly-sur-Seine. A disciple of Bouguereau and Tony Robert-Fleury, he won the Grand Prix de Rome in 1888. A sculptor in his spare time under the pseudonym Hirné, Le Riche created his paintings in volume. From 1894 he exhibited in Paris at the Salons des Artistes
