Description

Oak desk table in Renaissance Gothic style, with a large drawer in the belt, carved with foliage and foliage. A concave wooden pull button is positioned at the level of a grotesque head. An iron key activates the original lock in working order. The belt of this piece of furniture is entirely sculpted and decorated with grotesques in the center of each side. At the corners, lion heads are carved. The top has a gadrooned edge. The whole rests on two "baluster" feet carved with acanthus leaves, positioned on an ornate element whose ends are scrolled. A large spacer connects this richly ornamented base. A testament to the splendor of old times, this office will find its place in a property of character. *****

Period: Late 19th century Perfect condition after restoration in our workshop. Waxed finish.
