Description

Sideboard, in blackened pear wood and Boulle marquetry, richly decorated with bronzes and brass inlays. It opens with a double door, framed, furnished with spandrels in the upper part and darkened with a panel inlaid with tortoise shells and finely chiseled brass, decorated with scrolls, birds, vases, garlands and masks. These doors, decorated with scalloped strips and a bronze joint cover, are equipped with an original functional lock with entrances and key. The interior, all in mahogany, includes a shelf on cleats. Each upright of this buffet, also inlaid, presents in the upper part a man's mask in the hollow of a large volute. These uprights end in large acanthus leaf consoles. The sides also have spandrels. In the center are large motifs depicting a man's head wearing the skin of a dead lion. The whole rests
