Description

Easel for outdoor painting with storage drawer called "French easel", zinc interiors. As soon as artists painted landscapes they enriched their visual experience by drawing in front of the motif. This practice intensified from the end of the 18th century for outdoor enthusiasts. Color merchants developed tube paints and lightweight equipment suitable for walking. This lightweight easel rests on a sturdy tripod that can adapt to the inclination of the chosen terrain. The height of the picture support is adjusted using the adjustable feet. The maximum height is around 75 cm.

It comes from a Provençal painter, it remains as he closed it before returning to the workshop.
